

WHY IS THE ACCENT IMPORTANT IN SPEECH?

Bahromova Munisa Otabekovna

Termez State University Foreign Philology Faculty the 2nd course student.

@munisabahromova1@gmail.com , +99890 644 79 09

Abstract: Sometimes you may feel out of place or even embarrassed because of your different accent while you speak in English. You may feel like, you will not get the deserved attention due to this. This however, is a completely wrong way of thinking. Facts have proven that having an accent has more pros than cons. It helps you get your own identity, to stand out from the rest.

Keywords: Foreign languages, words ,accent, speech, pronunciation, phrase.

Pronunciation is essential when it comes to learning how to speak in English. The individual wants to understand the new language. Also, there is the need to make sure that people around get what is being said. But, this does not imply that the accent needs to be native. Having a different accent is quite advantageous in itself. Following are some reasons why. As a non-native, you must remember the grammar rules, enrich your vocabulary, pay attention to correct pronunciation, and keep a proper accent while speaking English. The correct pronunciation will help you move smoothly through many situations like office meetings, presentations, sales pitches, customer service, movie dates, etc. Here are the main benefits you can reap from learning American English pronunciation.

Correctly formed sentences in the speech process are usually in several places supersegment requires the correct use of units. A lot of word stress use of a syllabic word in a syllable corresponding to existing norms and a sentence. Correct use of accent determines fluency in the language. Words some vowels and consonants are incorrect through stress and tone of voice can also be understood when pronounced. However, all vowels are in the spoken word and consonants have the appropriate pronunciation, and there is no room for error in the use of stress if placed, the speech will be seriously impaired. Regarding the specific features of the accent and its practical classification, English, in Russian and Uzbek phonolinguistics by scientists mainly in the 60s of the last century. A number of theoretical and empirical scientific research works have been carried out since increased. There are different definitions of word stress or accentema by scholars given According to B. A. Bogoroditsky, accent is articulatory and breath is characterized by an increase or decrease in energy associated with receiving.

A series conducted in order to determine how lexical stress is formed. Experiments have shown that to understand the accented syllable, the sound is mainly vowel different characteristics of sound are important. The reason is the product of the joints is closely related to vowel sounds. The accent is on this word a certain vowel (or syllable) is longer and emphasized. In terms of perception, all accented syllables are common sign is that it is clearly distinguished from the rest of the unstressed syllables. That's it and for clarity, at least four factors are important. Word stress and sentence stress are interrelated. After all, word stress and both theoretical and practical within the delimitation function of sentence stress is important from the point of view. Sentence stress is usually the most important part of a word the accent of the word on the syllable falls on the specified syllable. Therefore, the horse the accentual structure of defining words is the stress in the phrase is the order. At the same time, the accent pattern of the phrase is semantic and syntactic formed by factors. The part of the phrase is always stressed words are words that have the meaning of fire. They are the main part of the phrase represents the concept, so it has a certain semantic value in the sentence any word can have sentence stress. Fluent English can boost your confidence. With proper pronunciation, you can talk fluently without the fear of sounding like an outsider—no need to hesitate speaking up when you are confident to exchange some quirky jokes. You can have strong relationships with your friends and colleagues with confident speech.

Confident and clear speech helps you appear perfectly poised and leads to better social skills, improving your personal and professional life. You can confidently meet new people at work and outside of work. A confident person can deliver presentations better at work or college. One thing that distinguishes you from a group of people is your confidence. For that, you need a strong hold on the American accent.

Having a native accent helps bring new clients to your firm or business. Clear speech is vital in reeling in new clients or retaining old ones. If you cannot convey your ideas clearly, it can backfire professionally. You should know how to pronounce words correctly so clients with all linguistic backgrounds are comfortable with your English. Professional communication that is easy to understand is a norm that is expected by small businesses and enterprises. Many factors contribute to career growth; one is your communication skills. Professional communication can impress your bosses. Nobody would want to miss a career advancement due to concerns in verbal communication. Get the opportunity to influence your colleagues and supervisors with your clear speech, accurate pronunciation, and confidence. All these qualities will smooth your way to a work promotion, hopefully. But you have to work hard!

In the phonological aspect, lexical stress (here, stress is also called differential stress named) has the characteristic of distinguishing meaning. Such a situation in many languages, in particular, it is also available in English and Uzbek languages: 1) There has been a significant increase in the number of young people who smoke. 2) The population may increase by 15 percent. The word increase in the quoted sentences is first noun ['ɪnkri:s], next and in the sentence, it acts as a verb [ɪn'kri:s]. In Uzbek, apple (fruit), apple (infinitive form of the verb). A word with the same sequence of sounds combinations and compound words from lexical stress to distinguish words we use: 'black 'bird (black bird, any black bird (word combination)), 'black-bird' (a type of bird found mainly in Europe and North America (compound word)). Such words out of context are just emphasis we can distinguish using. In short, the accent falls on one of the syllables determines the meaning and pronunciation. Word stress is lexical stress, lexical stress is also held.

Speaking an English accent is one way to keep the language dynamic and alive. It can be attractive and set you apart. It is therefore essential that you focus on what you are trying to say. It helps putting your point on the table strong for people to notice. The accent adds up to the effort. Be confident, and don't look back.

References

1. Conversations about a foreign language lesson: for students of pedagogical institutes manual / Passov E.I., Kolova T.I., Volkova T.A., Dobronravova T.N., Voronova O.M., Krainova E.A. - L., "Education", - 1975.
2. Bim I.L. On the issue of the methodology of teaching foreign languages. // IYaSh.-1974.- No. 2.-S.19-32.
3. Volovin A.V. Foreign languages in British and American methodological systems Communicative approach to learning // Communicative approach to learning foreign languages approach: collection of articles. scientific. works, volume 275 - M., 1985.
4. Introduction to the communicative methodology of teaching English: Russian teachers guide to -Oxford University Press, 1997.